Progress on the Pawling Newspaper

For many years Pawling had a local newspaper. The Pawling Press ceased publication in March 2012. Without a local newspaper important local events and goings on are missed. At this time, Pawling Matters, sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce, provides a monthly magazine with selected local news but cannot provide comprehensive local coverage.

In March 2015 a group of interested citizens formed a committee to examine the feasibility of publishing a local paper. This group has proposed a not-for-profit community newspaper that will offer local news and information to residents and non-residents who are interested in Pawling.

The newspaper will be sponsored by a group of community associations with the help of individual benefactors. The plan is to engage all the civic, cultural and religious organizations in Pawling to lend support to the paper. To catalyze the initiative, prominent organizations such as the Chamber of Commerce and the Pawling Board of Education have offered to lead the support for the venture. With this backing, it is anticipated that additional community support will be forthcoming.

The editorial content of the paper would be delegated to an editorial committee representing the various organizations thereby removing the sponsors from the day-to-day operations of the paper to ensure editorial independence. The intent is to record all that happens in the community without editorial slant.

Published weekly the paper will be available on Friday morning. The newspaper will be distributed throughout the community through merchants and organizations for free. The plan is to reach every household in Pawling. Subscriptions would be available at a modest cost. In order to minimize front-end expenditure the paper will use the tabloid format of The Pawling Press.

The paper will employ a professional editor and reporting staff to cover the various Town, Village and School District meetings. Additional content will be provided by individuals, civic groups, sports groups and other local entities. Ad revenue will be generated by a sales rep working on commission. Production staff will work part time most likely in Pawling. Printing will be handled outside the area by a specialized newspaper printer. The paper will be supported entirely by ad revenues.

The preliminary budget indicates this is possible on an on-going basis with initial support in Year 1 and a smaller contribution in Year 2. To assist the launch of the paper it will be mailed to every Pawling and Holmes resident and to local merchants and organizations for the first two months of operation. This will make people aware that a newspaper is being published.

If you think that you, your business or organization can benefit from such an effort, we urge you to contact the Newspaper Committee at info@pawlingrecord.com and schedule a meeting. The presentation is brief and there will be a Q&A session afterward.

Danger is Lurking Online. Here's How to Protect Your Business

Bridget Weston Pollack, Vice President of Marketing & Communications, SCORE

As you grow your company, you might be amazed by the tools and systems that can make doing business easier. Technology can help you work more efficiently, connect with customers more easily, and of course, allow you to make sales and grow revenue. But doing business online with the amount of technology we all use can bring risk to your business.

Did you know cybercrime is one of the biggest threats business of all sizes face? More than 75 percent of data breaches target small and medium-sized businesses, which can cause major havoc for your business operations. Sixty percent of small businesses affected by cybercrime will close within six months of the breach, according to a study by McAfee. Think those statistics are scary? Imagine if your business was included among them.

Here are a few tips for protecting your business from cybercrime.

Protect your network

First and foremost: Create and maintain a secure network for your business operations. A password may seem second nature for log-on, but do you have a firewall? Contact your internet service provider to check on your security options and find out where your network protection may be falling short.

Employees should resist the urge be helpful by providing your Wi-Fi password to customers or visitors; if you wish to offer Wi-Fi to visitors, create a second network for guest use.

Talk with your employees

Next, talk with your employees about keeping your business safe. They should create strong passwords for work-related accounts, and avoid completing personal tasks on company computers to reduce vulnerability.

If your staff or contractors bring their own devices to work, create a policy to specify when and how they can access company data on their personal devices. If you use mobile phones to share company or customer information, be sure to have a passcode set on your phone and sync your phone to your computer frequently.

Back up your data

Encourage your staff to back up company data regularly, either to a cloud service, to a backup hard drive, or both. Consider scheduling a regular backup day each week to get employees in the habit.

You should also make a plan for how to handle any downtime that could come with a breach or other emergency. How will you access client files, invoices, passwords or other data you might need to keep your business running? Who's your point person if there's a breach of some sort or data disappears? Talk about contingency plans, and update them regularly so your team is best prepared to handle difficult situations.

Stay alert

One of the toughest parts of avoiding cybercrime is keeping up with the changing landscape of how we do business online. By staying up to date with business news, you'll help yourself stay aware of potential threats to your cybersecurity system.

Not sure if you're doing enough — or the right things — to protect your small business? Get in touch with a SCORE mentor, who can help you review your practices.

Ann Godesky Honored for Service to Community

Ann Godesky, a resident of Pawling, was honored on June 13, 2016, during the Women of Distinction award ceremony which took place at Mount Kisco Elementary School honoring women in the 40th Senate District. Chosen by Pawling Town Supervisor David Kelly and the Town Board to represent Pawling, State Senator Terrance P. Murphy presented the award for her outstanding volunteerism. Ann has devoted both her professional career and volunteer hours in the service of youngsters.

Ann is a retired teacher having worked in the Pawling Central School District for 41 years. She was the Chair of the Fine and Practical Arts Department, as well as Athletic Director in the High School. Additionally, she was a Consultant for the U.S. Department of Education Northeast Regional Center for Drug Free Schools and Communities.

In addition to her professional work, Ann has volunteered her time with a range of organizations, including the Dutchess County Youth Board, Dutchess County Children's Services Council, Task Force of Drugs and Alcohol, Lakeside & Holiday Hills Transition Advisory Board, and the Pawling Community Task Force. Ann serves on the Boards of the Pawling Resource Center and Pawling Public Radio. She is President of Pawling Youth Development and Pawling Rotary.

Ann has been recognized for her hard work and commitment to Youth with several awards, including the 2011 Voices of Pawling Volunteerism Award, 2003 Dutchess County Youth Board Award for Service to the Youth of Dutchess County, 1999 Finalist, New York State Teacher of the Year, 1995 Regional Center Award for Promoting Wellness Among Youth in the Northeast, and the 1995 Pawling Central School District's Child Centered Teacher Award.

Since retiring, Ann has devoted her personal free time to her painting, developing her talent as an artist of note in the Pawling community and beyond.

A Pawling Resident With Rising Aspirations

When successful graphic designer Cynthia Mok Foscato decided to switch careers, she opted to follow her heart and establish a business in Pawling, something she had always thought about. She had always been interested in making sourdough bread because of its superior health benefits, so last year she set off to Vermont and apprenticed with a master baker that specialized in making sourdough. She came back to Pawling with all that knowledge and started the Pawling Bread Company.

The Pawling Bread Company currently makes seven varieties of sourdough that are sold around the county. The bread can be found at McKinney & Doyle (roasted garlic with rosemary and black pepper sourdough), the Blue Olive, Sprout Creek Farm and McEnroe Organic Farm Market and now for the first time, at the Pawling Farmer's Market. On Saturdays, Cynthia and her family can be found selling selected sourdough varieties and their Harlem Valley Honey. They also feature cultured butter from Vermont and butter boards from Living Edge Designs.

With 5 Star reviews like this; it's no wonder that Pawling Bread's offerings sell quickly:

"I'm a fan and so is my husband (he is truly a fussy guy!). Until now, all breads were compared to Arthur Avenue bread from the Bronx as the benchmark for quality. Now the gold-standard is Pawling Bread Co."

So, look for them at the Farmers Market or the other venues and visit them on Facebook for the latest news.

Stuff the Bus ...an Inspiring Day of Community Giving!

This past Saturday was one of Pawling's shining moments! The Stuff The Bus event, presented by Pawling Rotary and their project partners, The Pawling Resource Center, Hannaford's, and the Pawling Central School District, to benefit the Food Pantry of the Pawling Resource Center, was an awesome success.

With the yellow school bus parked outside of Hannaford's from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m., our community of food shoppers bought and then gave the desperately needed supplies for the Pawling Resource Center's Food Bank. Our community gave, and gave and gave. By the end of the day, the bus was totally stuffed, and the folks of Pawling proved once again that they are the most caring, generous, and good willed people that any little town could ever hope for!

In spite of the record heat, the volunteers from Rotary, which included Rotary President, Jeff Asher, Vice President, Ann Godesky and Secretary, Susan Stone, along with board members Carl Dill and Lori Johnson, and additional Rotary members Fayne Daniels, John Thomes, and Margot Jacobs joined PRC's Program Coordinator, Terry Ariano, and volunteer Sue Smith, as they spent the day packing and sorting the many goods that were donated. Alex Badia from the Pawling Interact Club lent his strong arms and stuffing talent to the day along with Tom McFall, Manager at Hannaford's, and his associates, who not only hosted this event, but contributed a whole lot of needed STUFF. Twice, the Hannaford's crew paraded eight packed shopping carts out of Hannaford's front door, loaded with needed items. Mr. McFall acknowledged that the associates had personally contributed to fund this parade of produce, along with donations from members of the Hannaford Corporate family. It was an amazing sight and one which prompted a standing ovation both times from all the volunteers present.

Moreover, many community members who emerged from Hannaford's without goods for the bus, generously contributed dollars to assist in purchasing things for the food pantry that were still needed. These donations added up to $369.00!

Volunteer bus drivers, Tammy Fielding, Colleen Washburn, and

Kevin Richard went above and beyond as they lent their enthusiasm and ability to, not only driving the school bus to and from Hannaford's parking lot, but packing donated goods into it and out of it upon reaching its final destination at the Resource Center. Additional volunteers, Bette Slocum, Roman Andruk, PRC Board Chair Jon Ellingworth, as well as Town Supervisor Dave Kelly, also assisted with the unpacking process.

In all, 300 bags of needed items were donated and unloaded into the Pawling Resource Center at 126 East Main Street. After the requisite weighing, the terrifically stuffed bus delivered 1,794 pounds of food, toiletries and cleaning supplies to the Resource Center Food Bank. Forty nine cases of paper products and sixty three cases of diapers and wipes were among the cache that was unloaded. Terry Ariano was joyous, as she emailed volunteers Monday morning exclaiming, "You should see the floor of the PRC!" Volunteers will be busy unpacking items and stocking shelves.

The response to this event by everyone, volunteers and community members alike, was a wonderful testament to the joy of giving back. Uncontrolled smiling could be seen on volunteer faces throughout the day, in spite of the sweltering heat. Parents took advantage of this truly teachable moment of giving by allowing their children to climb into the bus to personally deliver the goods that were bought moments before. It was a feel good day for everyone involved!

As the Pawling Resource Center plans for their annual Fall Walk-a-thon the morning of September 17th, which will raise money for their transportation services program, the volunteers, Board of Directors and Program Coordinator will also welcome the Pawling Community with an afternoon event at Lakeside park. It promises to be a day of celebration and thanksgiving, as the PRC marks its 40th year of service to the community. Stay tuned for upcoming information about the Pawling Resource Centers Walk So They May Ride, followed by The Big Thank You! See you there!!

Mike Pepper, The Computer Guy - Beware the WOW! Computer For Seniors

We mentioned this about a year ago, but the WOW! computer has come up a couple of times in just the last month, so here it is again.

If you happen to be looking for a computer for a senior member of your family or community, this is an alert and warning for you.

One of my customers, who happens to be more “senior” than me, has been thinking about getting a new computer for several months. He emailed me this week, announcing proudly that he had just purchased a “WOW!” computer that bills itself as being designed expressly for senior citizens, for $1,200.

That seemed like an awful lot of money for a basic desktop computer, even if it is a 21 inch touchscreen with a super easy interface; so I jumped on the web to check out the specs for this machine.

What I found is that, as far as the hardware goes, this is actually about a $400 computer. Definitely not a $1,200 computer.

The WOW! Computer does have a unique interface that purports to be designed expressly for senior citizens who might be new to using computers and the Internet, but it is certainly not worth the $800 premium that the WOW! people are charging.

The WOW! Computer might actually be an attractive choice for someone who has never, ever used a computer before, or who will never ever use it for anything more than email and surfing the web, but not at that price. Part of the pitch for the WOW! is that it runs a customized version of the Linux operating system. This is actually not an attractive feature for a computer for most seniors.

The folks who use this machine will, from time to time, need some help from a family member or friend, often over the phone. Let's say that happens to be you. Of course your computer, the one that you're familiar with, runs Windows or Apple OS-X, and very likely not any flavor of Linux. That difference compounds mightily the difficulty of you and your senior friend understanding each other while trying to figure how to do this or fix that on the computer. It is far better if everyone in the support circle is working with the same computer operating system.

On top of that difference issue is the fact that, while $80 or so of the price of a new computer is for Microsoft Windows; Linux is essentially a “free” operating system. I could understand the WOW! people adding a bit for their special version, but not an additional $800.

A quick search of reputable online stores for computers with similar specs to the WOW! will bring up an array of name-brand All-In-One touch screen machines in the range of $400 to $600 that run genuine Windows and that actually have superior specs. In some cases; far superior.

So, heads up if you have a senior friend or family member looking for a new computer. These WOW! folks pitch it hard, but their product is not worthy of the premium that they are charging.

Hoping, as always, that this is all quite clear and useful; nevertheless if I can fill in some details or help with anything on your computers, please don't hesitate to call: Mike Pepper ~ Computer Guy. www.PawlingComputerGuy.com 845-855-5824

PCSB Bank To Open New Branch on Rt. 22 in Pawling, August 15th

The new PCSB Bank branch building on Rt. 22 is attractive and nearly double the size of its previous Pawling location. Access is easy and parking convenient. A nice addition to Pawling.

“The new branch reflects our commitment to expanding our ability to meet customer needs while maintaining the focus on our ‘True Local, True Banking’ style of personalized service. This is the foundation of our philosophy,” stated Joseph D. Roberto, chairman, president and CEO of PCSB Bank. “As a community-based bank, we are dedicated to helping customers and businesses in the area grow and achieve their goals.”

“Our size and structure allow for a high level of flexibility, especially as it relates to consumer and commercial lending options,” noted Robert Farrier, PCSB’s senior vice president and retail banking officer. Unlike larger banks, decisions are made locally right here so we are able to move quickly when our clients need it most. We are part of the fabric of the communities we serve and truly understand our customers—which is very important in today’s complex economy.”

PCSB Bank recently changed its name after 140 years from Putnam County Savings Bank and operates 15 banking centers in Dutchess, Westchester, Putnam and Rockland counties. Founded in 1871, PCSB Bank (www.pcsb.com) is a New York chartered mutual savings bank with assets of $1.2 billion.

Christopher Boemio will be the branch manager and Patricia Sullivan the assistant branch manager at the new PCSB Bank branch at 144 Rt. 22 in Pawling. Expanded hours of operation Monday-Saturday and a spacious, modern facility are thoughtfully designed to enhance the banking experience. PCSB Bank, a member of the Pawling Chamber of Commerce, looks forward to welcoming its existing and new customers August 15th.

How does YOUR Garden Grow?

Donate your extra produce to the PRC!

After all the planting is done and the harvesting begins, do you often find yourself with much more home grown produce than you and your family can possibly consume? It is probably at this point that you try your hand at canning, or start packing up the excess for everyone on your block plus anyone who has ever friended you on Facebook!

Well, the Pawling Resource Center would be thrilled to help you find loving homes for your over abundance of firm ripe tomatoes or your bumper crop of beans, peas, carrots and corn...or any other fresh veggie from your garden that you would be willing to share with neighbors who might have difficulty providing these healthy, seasonal treats for their families.

Children, especially, love to munch upon the sweetness of fresh produce. Think how wonderful it would be to be able to add this pleasure to the joy of their childhood summer. Please consider donating the excess from your garden to the Pawling Resource Center. The folks at the PRC will guarantee good and appreciative homes for every last crunchy morsel.

Please call the PRC at 845-855-3459 to find out how to arrange veggie adoptions for your extra garden goodies!
